The Big Head

is of two kinds—conceit and the big head that comes from a sick headache. Does your head ever feel like a gourd and your brain feel loose and sore? Card From T. Z. Martin.

To my many friends and loyal supporters:

Gentlemen:—I take this method, with uncovered head, to thank you individually and collectively, with all my heart for your strong and loyal support during my last two years for Clerk of the Circuit Court. I cannot command language to express my heartfelt appreciation for this, the greatest political victory, which you have ever given me, as by your votes you have vindicated me fully of all the false, vile and slanderous accusations which were made against me by some of my political enemies; and for your putting me far above the apparent reproach which was intended thereby.

I ask God's substantial blessings upon each and every friend who helped by his ballot to vindicate me as afforded by giving me the victory over it all.

And during my next term it shall be my purpose, if possible, to give the whole people better service than ever before.

Again thanking you, I remain, yours most gratefully and obediently.

T. Z. MARTIN,

Clerk of the Circuit Court.

PERSONAL.

The hardest thing I ever did in my life, or tried to do, was to make amends to some one whom I had wronged. My life has been spent in wickedness, all forms and in all manners. I have resolved, by uniting with the Methodist church, to quit it. And, in as much as I have, wish to say that I intend to give up certain lines of what in the past has my pleasure to participate in. Notably, indulging in wickedness and the pleasures of this world. They do not gain a man anything, certainly have gained for me nothing, as thirty years of my life has proven. I shall quit forever any and everything that is not Godly, so far as able. To be brief, I have given my life to the Creator, and from this on propose to serve Him to the best of my ability. This decision was made cool and deliberately, not through any excitement or the pleadings of any one, other than those in general who have the welfare of a neighbor at heart, but after a careful, cool, calm and deliberate decision of my own. And—

To those whom I have associated with in years gone by, and who have heard me use profane language, I beg their pardon.

To those who have seen me real from strong drink (and I confess I have) I beg their pardon.

To those whom I have participated with in other sinful ways of this old wicked world, I beg their pardon. I hope never to commit those sins again.

I have quit politics. Some men can be politicians and religious; I firmly believe it—I can not. My disposition will not permit it. Hereafter I will be content to labor as a common man only and to avoid any and everything that is not Christ-like. I want to serve Him and be as near like Him as I can. I need the prayers of all good people. Pray for me that I may hold out faithful. Humble and meek I am, yours for good,

J. R. BORLAND.

She Didn't Roost With the Chickens. The homely forms of speech used by the country people with whom little Edith and her mother boarded last summer were frequently very puzzling to the child.

One evening the farmer's wife, who had been for a few minutes with Edith, remarked that, as she was very tired that night, she believed she would "go to roost with the chickens." When Edith's bedtime arrived a little later the youngster was nowhere to be found. After a considerable search she was discovered sitting on a large stone near the chicken house quietly watching the fowls as they came in one by one.

"Edith," called her mother, "where are you doing there? I've been looking for you everywhere. It's time to go to bed."

"I know, mother," was the reply, "but they're nearly all in now, so she'll be here soon. I guess."

"Who are in and who will be there? What on earth are you talking about, child?" asked the mystified mother.

"Why," explained Edith rather impatiently, "you know Mrs. — who she was going to roost with the chickens tonight, and I'm waiting to see how she does it."—New York Times.
